

Understanding and Managing Transition Risk for Development Banks

AFD - Agence Française de Développement

3 November, 9:30 – 11:00

Development banks carry a double responsibility: like any financial institutions, they need to develop frameworks to measure and understand their own level of exposure. At the same time they must ensure that their clients and partners are aware of the growing importance of transition risk and accompanied in measuring and managing this risk. This side-event will share experiences in setting-up climate risk frameworks, outline tools and processes to measure transition risk (including the elaboration of stress test exercises) and give examples on challenges and approaches when improving disclosure around climate risks.
